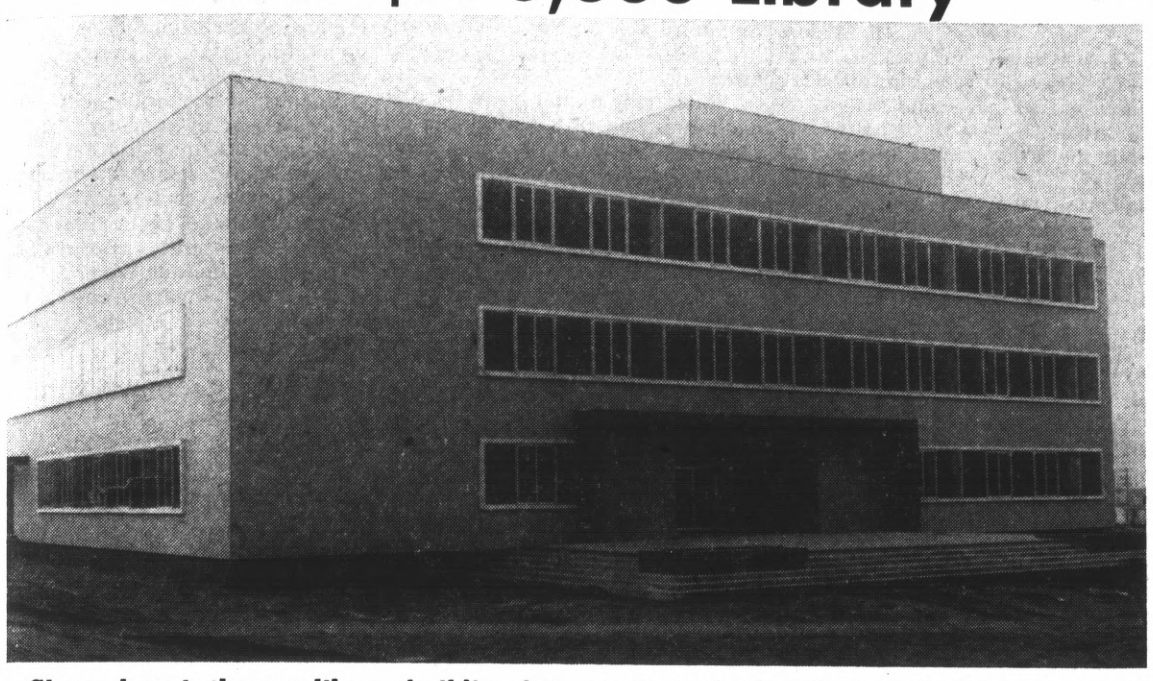
New $775,000 Library



Shown here is the new library building, latest of those to be opened to student use on the new campus. At the present time only the reading room, containing the Science and P.E. sections and those reserve books for courses taught on the new campus, are available to students. The building, built at a cost of over $775,000, contains many modern architectural ideas, including ceilings of accoustical tile and floors of sound absorbant material which serve to deaden the sound of footsteps and voices.

The reading room opened last Monday and will remain open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Although just this portion of the building is open at the present, tours of the entire edifice will be conducted soon. Transfer of all books and the completion of the building is expected to be finished by next semester.

Stunt Card Workers Lament Rooters' Lack Of Enthusiasm

By LAURA BOTTARO

One thing has been overlooked in the controversy over stunt cards. What of the students who gave their time to this project?

We have taken the liberty of interviewing a few of the members of the stunt card committee to find out just what they thought and how they felt about the stunt cards.

LACK OF COOPERATION

Wanda Harper, a member of the committee, felt that "after having spent hours of working on the stunt cards it certainly was a disappointment to see their failure, because it showed a great lack of cooperation from the students."

This statement could not be denied, since the stunt cards were collected during half-time at the Whittier game. Some of the students had not removed the rubber bands from the cards; others, whether through misunderstanding or merely through obstinance, raised the wrong color card causing confusion and disorganization.

Another opinion was expressed by Bev Greenberg, who was also a member of the committee. "It's not the work we put into those cards that matters, nor is it the result—failure. It's just the lack of cooperation with which the students accepted them. We realize that these card stunts need adjustment, but we also feel that school spirit should have motivated the students to do better than they did. The committee. however, is willing to put in any time required of them to try again, if it is the wish of the student body."

FRESHMEN SPARK—

Most of the committee members interviewed admitted the fact that what spirit we have is due almost entirely to freshman students.

During the past few years, State college has sought recognition as one of the West's leading colleges. Through an expansion of student body activities, athletic and otherwise, this goal is now in sight.

We've sat idly by, encouraging but not participating. Now, presented with the opportunity to take our turn, we've failed.

Perhaps we aren't ready for the "big leagues" yet.

Staters Display Paintings At Art Festival Show

When the Art Festival closed its doors at the Palace of Fine Arts last Sunday, four State students and one teacher took home the paintings which they displayed. None of State's entrants won any prizes but the satisfaction of having their pictures viewed by thousands of art lovers was gained.

Alda J. Cassanova, John E. Davis, Doug Havenmann, Josee M. Ostendorf were the students entered and Alexander Nepote, was the teacher.

Because school was just getting underway when the entry blanks had to be turned in, State failed to have entries file as a group. Mr. Nepote filed with the San Francisco Art Association; the other four were exhibited with the non-professional, non-affiliated group.

Classes of the Creative Arts division went to see the festival.

Danny Kaye Presents Colorful But Long Show; Calls TV 'Machine' In After-Curtain Interview

By VIC SPINGOLO

"When I'm on stage I do anything that comes into my head," said Danny Kaye in an interview last week. And judging from the exhaustive but entertaining show which he had just completed on the Curran stage, there couldn't have been much left in his head.

Kay cavorts about the stage for over an hour and a half presenting his unique collection of songs, gags, prattle, double-talk, dancing, clowning — and just being Danny Kaye for a 20 minute interval during which he sits (or lies) on the apron of the stage and tells his audience intimate little anecdotes about his children, his travels, and his career.

The tall, blond comedian maintains a tremendously furious pace throughout the performance, warning his audience that they're crazy if they think he'll get tired before they do. He proves his point, too, when people start to leave the auditorium while he's still going strong with a medley of songs from his forthcoming movie, "Hans Christian Andersen."

ORCHESTRA BREAK

Kaye was considerate enough to give the orchestra a short break while he carried on with only piano accompaniment, but unfortunately he didn't do the same for the audience. A solid 180 minutes spent watching even a top performer like Kaye gets just a shade wearing. This is especially true when he cuts himself off during his best routines ("Minnie the Moocher," "Anatole of Paris," and "Tiptoe Through the Tulips") for no apparent reason other than to get on to the rest of his vast repertroire.

The show's main fault is that it fails to reach a climax of any kind. Kaye has used up his best material before the first hour is up, and from then on he slips into his entertaining but comparatively minor routines. Unlike Judy Garland, who preceded him earlier in the season, Kaye has no "Over the Rainbow" to bring his show to a smashing climax. Neither has he any production numbers like Judy's "Couple of Swells" and "Get Happy"—both showstoppers.

July limited herself to only 45 minutes on stage, but every minute was a gem. Kaye might do well to study her format. His "Anatole of Paris" done in costume could be a standout. As it is, so much material of inferior or secondary quality is mixed in with the "grade A" type in a steady flow that dulls rather than sharpens the interest.

VAUDEVILLE DEAD

After the show, sitting alone on the bare stage, Kaye told the few reporters clustered in the orchestra section of the empty theatre that he doesn't see a return of vaudeville in the success of either his show or Judy Garland's; both shows include five acts of vaudeville, his collection being far inferior to Judy's group.

Progressing from vaudeville to television, Kaye states that the new medium is not for him. "In time it will settle down and take its place along with the radio, stage, and screen, but until then it's not for me . . . right now television just takes creative talent and smashes it. It's like a giant machine."

Shrugging off the horrible possibility of such a fate, Kaye turned to an analysis of his successful tours of England and other European countries. "The people in England are no different than those anywhere else. They've been brought up in a different culture which has perhaps made them appear more austere, but after you scratch the surface, they're the same as anybody."

SAME SHOW FOR BRITISH

Kay emphasized that he used basically the same show overseas that he uses at the Curran. "I don't change anything . . . they even knock themselves out over my imitation of an Englishman."

Turning to his career in Hollywood, the comedian voiced his belief that his newest film, based on the life of Hans Christian Andersen, will either ". . . be something everybody will love, or else they'll hate it." He stressed that the movie was quite a departure from his usual Hollywood product, and that nobody was more surprised than he when the government of Denmark filed a formal protest in Washington following the announcement that he, an American, was slated to portray the national hero of the Danes on the screen. "That was really something. I'm glad it all worked out all right."

By this time, it was long past both the dinner and cocktail hour, and yours truly, a victim of habit, was eager to leave, and rose to do so, but not before Kaye called out from the stage, "What's the matter? You got a deadline to make?" My attempt at an inconspicuous exit having been ruined I blurted, "Yet, a hot one. But, it's been fun." And it had been.

Letters To The Editor

THE BOILER ROOM

The Editor:

The Golden Gater of this semester is far below the quality of last term. No one aspect of the paper is poor, but rather the Gater as a whole. Last term's Gater was the result of steady increase in quality for many years. Now, that result has fallen off to its old lower standard.

Perhaps the main reason for this decline is the dual editorship in force this year. With one person in charge, the work will tend to be more coordinated whereas with two people responsible, certain weaknesses will slip by unnoticed. One editor will not know what the other has done or is doing. This can result in a poorer quality of Gater. The makeup of the paper is also below the standard of last semester.

The editorials reflect this weakness very greatly. Instead of having one powerful and effective editorial, the Gater has two petty and very infectual "quips." The two editorials seem to be just space fillers instead of honestly bringing a sorespot to the attention of the student body. How about a few articles written by foreign students telling of college life in other countries? Another improvement would be to include what is doing in the art, theatre and music worlds in San Francisco.

Respectfully

Rex Butler

C.S.T.A. Offers Numerous Advantages For Members

"The California Student Teachers' Association offers many opportunities for students who are working for a teaching credential," according to Dunham, CSTA president. Among the many advantages for the members are: job placements, CTA journal, hotel service bureau, and contact with professional people.

Sophomores and juniors are especially urged to look into this organization, said Miss Dunham.

The next meeting of the CSTA will be on Thursday, October 16 from 1 to 2 p.m. in Anderson Hall 210.

Gator Gridders Tame Tigers 14 To 0

Morretini, Magante Shine On Defense; Felure Out For Remainder Of Season

By HAL GRANT

Two sustained touchdown drives spelled the margin of victory for the Golden Gator gridders last Saturday afternoon as the men who carry the purple and gold banner turned back a determined Occidental eleven 14-0 before 2400 football enthusiasts in Cox stadium.

Early in the second quarter the Gators opened up the scoring when halfback John O'Shea took a pitch-out from qquarterback Maury Duncan and rambled five yards around right end for a TD and six points. Bob Brammeir, up from the JV's, booted the point after touchdown.

State was unable to unleash its running attack again until the last play of the third quarter when after driving 69 yards to the Tiger seven yard line, Bob Lualhati romped around right end for the final TD of the game. Brammeir again kicked the PAT.

The outcome of the contest was never in doubt but the unorthodox defense the Tigers used complicated the Gator blocking assignments.

BREMOND RIDES AGAIN

On last play of the game Harry "the Horse" Bremond intercepted a Ray Sausser desperation heave on the State 15 yard marker and outmaneuvered the whole Occidental team in sprinting 85 yards to pay dirt. The play was called back, due to a State clipping penalty.

Harley Felure, second string fullback and PAT specialist, and George Wehner, offensive end, joined the ranks of the casualties last Saturday. Felure will be out the remainder of the season with his broken ankle and Wehner will probably miss the Cal Poly contest with a broken rib.

CAL POLY NEXT

This Saturday will find the State gridders journeying to San Luis Obispo for an important game with the Cal Poly gridders. For the first time this year the Gators will be underdogs in a football contest. Informed bystanders rate the Mustangs a 13 point favorite. The men from Cal Poly are fresh from a 19-0 victory over Santa Barbara State College.

Soccermen Bow To USF Dons 4 To 0

A hard-fighting bunch of Gator soccermen met a great team last Saturday at the new campus upper field and battled grimly until the final whistle found them still trailing the USF Dons 4 to 0.

Scoring three of their four total points in the first half, the Dons got off to a first qquarter lead when Jose Ignoffo took a pass from Brian Pike and slammed in the first USF goal from a difficult angle.

The USF brand of lightning struck again in the second quarter as the Dons scored twice. Pike counted first in that period as he used his head to arch in the point past beleagured State goalie Owen Kashaveroff. Another head shot scored for the Dons as Jorge Valdez took the ball off the cross bar where Kashaveroff had deflected it and bamped it in to make the score 3 to 0 with the Dons on top.

An inspired Gator squad held the USF team scoreless in the third quarter, and actually carried the game to the Dons but failed to score.

In the fourth period USF tallied again as Jose Leon took a pass from the Don's Manny Ortiz and booted the ball into the net to end the scoring and put USF out in front 4 to 0 at the game's end.

Kashaveroff, constantly under pressure from the booming Don offense, played good ball for State as did Frank Verducci, Ron Kasabian, and Charlie Andrews.

The Dons have lost only one contest in four years and look as if they may complete another season in like manner if they continue in the fashion exhibited last Saturday against the Staters.

Score by quarters:

	1	2	3	4
State	0	0	0	0	—0
USF	1	2	0	1	—4

WATER POLO

State Splashers Will Travel To Stockton This Afternoon

The San Francisco State Water Polo team under the mentorship of Hal Harden will travel to Stockton this afternoon to take on a strong Stockton College squad. The Gators will be in quest of their first victory today as they lost their initial tilt to power laden Cal JV aggregation two weeks ago by a 8-1 count. Norm Stupfel scored the lone State tally late in the third quarter.

"Water polo is still in its infancy at State," declared Coach Harden in a recent interview, "and this year's team is essentially a building operation."

The sport of water polo was only initiated here last year and the Gator splashers did extremely well, managing to win four contests, despite the handicap of having only one experienced man (Norm Stupfel) on the squad.

State is a member of the Northern California Water Polo League which is composed of Cal Aggies, UC JV's, Santa Clara, Stockton College, and the Olympic Club reserves. Each team plays a home and home match with the other five mmbers of the lague, thus making a total of 10 league contests.

Bolstering this year's Gator squad are returning lettermen Norm Stupfel, Bruce Duncan, Dick Storer, Ron Penzel, Doug McVeigh, Chris Bratt, and Bob Knapp.

Men new to the team this year are Norman Cady, freshman from Jefferson High and a sprint swimmer there; Jim Davis, Berkeley High distance man; Dave Duranleau, member of the '52 State swim team; Jack Havery, freshman; Bob Long, freshman who played water polo in the service; Tom Lord, freshman diving ace; Bob Purcell, freshman; George Schaudra, two year letterman on the State golf squad; John Schmitt, freshman; Ed Soderman, freshman from Berkeley High; and Bob Vilas, freshman.

Alhambra Trims JV Gridders 40-0

The San Francisco State College JV footballers dropped their third straight contest Saturday night to the Alhambra A.C. 40-0 in the Martinez Stadium.

The Alhambra AC's literally scored at will as they scared the Gators with their size and experience.

State was unable to score despite the services of line coach Ray Ponzekoff and Al Endriss. Endriss everything from quarterback to safety.

Gator backs who showed promise in Saturday night's fray were Ed Miller and Ezy Galante.

On Saturday, October 18th, the JV's travel to Marin to tackle the College of Marin gridders.

Out On A Limb . . .

. . . WITH HERB COLTON

I've thought it over since my column of last week. The decision reached was that I do not want to write like Herb Caen. I just want his money. Besides, it's tough filling news space. Ya gotta have a pipeline. No pipeline, no "news." When I sat down to write this week's feature I found that I had only one little gem. I may as well give the one little item I have and then dispense with the prattle and go out "on the limb."

The small joke I have has to do with the gent who rushed into the drugstore and demanded some chlorophyll aspirins. The chemist replied that he does not stock them nor had he ever heard of said item. "Besides," said the chemist, "why do you wish chlorophyll aspirins?" "I have a stinking headache," said the customer.

I want to make a confession here. It is that I read the Golden Gater from cover to cover. In a recent issue I ran across a letter from Bert Phillips, your very fine Activities Commissioner. In the letter Bert was giving the fans who attended the State-Whittier football game a dressing down about the manner in which they participated in the card stunts. They were most uncooperative.

For you readers who are unfamiliar with the legitimate "beef" that Mr. Phillips has, I will try to bring you up to date on the most recent hassle to confront the undergraduates.

It so happens that to go along with State's "best ever" football team with its "most ambitious" schedule, the people in charge of wild-eyed fans were eager to unite their group to bring it up to the caliber of the team on the field. Up to the night of the Whittier game you could have seen people dressed up like alligators and alligators going around acting like people and marching bands and card stunts. But alas, no more card stunts. It seems that some students were unwilling to participate. Card stunts call for 100 per cent participation. It indeed must have been discouraging for Mr. Phillips to see the shambles the Staters were making out of the display.

As a result of the apathy of the rooters the scheme has been disbanded. It is just as well. There could have been much embarrassment caused. Can't you just envision the section trying to give, say a HELLO FRESNO, and some lazy or half frozen students leaving off the O and FRES just because wanted a cup of coffee at halftime?

All this brings to mind a fairly amusing halftime exhibit that I witnessed a number of years ago during a USC-UCLA football game in the Coliseum in Los Angeles. The year, I believe, was 1945. It was BT (before television)) and seats were hard to come by in the 103,000 capacity bowl. My mother's bookie was able to get me a pair of ducats and an oxygen mask for my seats high in the bowl. I entered the stadium at the start of the game and was able to get to my seats by half time. I didn't care much about missing any of the game because you couldn't see to the floor of the bowl anyway. I came to see the card stunts. I tell you, those Trojan rooters knew their card tricks. Rumor had it that they gave 5 units of college credit for the students' efforts as a captive audience.

Now an enterprising fellow who wished to call himself Mad Man Muntz enters this tale. It was during the late part of the war years that the Mad Man was getting his start as a not-so-reputable used car salesman. This character was a genius in promoting daffy ways of getting his name into print. Our own Horse Trader Ed is a piker alongside of this guy.

Well, as the card stunts were proceeding with the usual HI BRUIN and WELCOME ALUMNI stuff that you get from such displays, all of a sudden the section of 5000 strong flashed a MAD MAN MUNTZ. This bit of national publicity probably cost the Mad Man maybe a half a hundred. He might of slipped the President in Charge of Card Stunts a few bucks along with his stack of cards. The working students have no idea what they are producing when they hold high a card.

I have a great deal of admiration for the abilities of Bert Phillips. But I fail to go along with card stunts for State College. You can't just say, "let's have card stunts," and let it go at that. There are too many factors to consider.

Point one against cards: the students were asked to wear white shirts (they are necessary in such a maneuver). Howinell can you expect anyone to disrobe so in Cox stadium? I wouldn't even suggest to my mother-in-law that she cross 19th avenue without an overcoat and three blankets. Point two against card stunts: Cox stadium desires their students to occupy the north side of the bowl, leaving maybe 5-600 on the south wall. So you have a thousand or so working for the amusement of the handfull on the opposite side. Point three against card stunts: How about that fog? I had a hard time seeing the playing field let alone focusing on the section opposite me. Point four against card stunts: A cup of coffee does a lot for a body braving the elements in the bowl hard by Lake Merced on a blustery eve. Point six and seven against card stunts: It costs money, and is it worth it?
